Growing Heirloom Tomatoes

Wednesday March 4, 2009 at 7:00 PM
William R. Gilstorf Meeting Room
St. Clair Shores Public Library

Master Gardener and Belle Isle Botanical Society volunteer Ed Krappmann presents tips on growing old varieties of tomatoes from seeds and plants. The botanical name for the tomato is “Lycopersicon Esculentum” or “wolf peach edible.” Find out more about the history and propagation of the tomato at this unique gardening program. Everyone is welcome to attend this free event!

The St. Clair Shores Historical Commission is pleased to announce the seventh annual series of lectures in memory of Joseph Laurence Maison. He was a descendent of the Maison family, who owned and farmed Eagle Pointe subdivision for over 100 years. Joseph's daughter, Lorelei Maison Rockwell and her husband Wayne Tilton Kennedy have underwritten a series of three lectures on natural history, hunting, boating, fishing and gardening to be held each year in the spring. A donation for books on these topics in Joseph Laurence Maison's memory has also enriched our Library's collection.
